Best Foreign Bank

Submissions should contain all published financials on the bank's operation in the country in question. In Malaysia, for example, it is possible to include ALL key financials such as net income numbers and return on equity. Where financials are not separately broken out or published, institutions should provide as much data as is possible.

- The number of branches and headcount (how has this changed in the period?)
- What are the key business lines the bank undertakes in the country and their approximate percentage contribution to the bottom line?
- List all key transactional business executed by the bank, such as important participations in a loan, an important in-country cash management mandate, an increase in the bank's custody business in the June-May period, trade finance, etc.
- Has the bank made any acquisitions? How have they improved the franchise? Give details.
- Testimonials from clients in the relevant countries will gain credit in the decision making process. No more than five testimonials should be included, with a balance between major local companies and multinationals operating in that country. Testimonials should come on the client's headed paper and more credit will be given where a client makes specific mention of why the bank is their preferred choice (as opposed to a boilerplate letter).
